Regard to McKinley.

Not Against Mr. McKinley

Washington March 22 U 8 Sena tor Wm E Chandler in a communication to the Washington Poet asserts that an interview in that paper led to much misrepresentation of its terms. The New York World, he writer, published with quotation marks words I never used I said nothing unkind of Mr McKinley personally, but called attached to certuis methods of some of his managers and protested against their adoption. The further point of the Senator's communication is to the effect that the interests of the Republican party would be seriously injured by demanding and releving large contributions in any one shavor from representatives of protected interests. Such a movement he empadders unfair and anjust thour dother cipididates in whose behalf he declares no such large same of monny as those he inclinates were planded in Mr McKinley's behalf are hing raised or used. He says Messas Reed Morton, Quny, Cullom, Allison, Davis and Manderson are as good friends of protection as Mr McKinley and the triumph of any one of them would by as sure a guarantee of the enactment of publicus and effective rarill laws as would be the victory of Mr McKinley 1 or manufar. the of the enertment of pulk hous and effective railf laws as would be the victory of Mr McKistey for manufacturity to court') atellarge sume of money to be expended in mominating Mr McKistey over any other candid definitiento named would be most unjust? IN ANTARCTIC SEAS

Possibilities of New Seating Whaling Industries C L Borchgrevink, the Antarctic ex plorer, is at present staying at the Everett House New York there on Monday from Washington where he has been lecturing on the ob-servations taken in the course of his 1891 explorations within the Antarctic circle and on the results he hopes to accom plish in his forthcoming expedition to the Southern ice regions, which will set out from London on September 1 next the Southern Re region, which will set out from London on September I next When in Washington Herr Borthgre vink had an interview with President Cleveland, to whom he unfolded in detail his plans for his forthcoming exploration of the Antarctic continent. His main interest is centered in developing the scientific knowledge of the conditions of the South Polar lands and seas But while this will be the avowed and undoubtedly the principal of test the expedition, particular attention will be applied to the fur-sealing and whaling possibilities of the Antarctic Oceas When seen by a reporter Herr Borch greyink declined to discuss the nature of a file interview with President Cleveland, but it is understood that their talk related to the development in the Southern seasion new regions for the capture of fur seals and wholes. That such exist has been pratty well proved. Sir James Ross, in his journey to the Southern seas Although Sir James Brought home no speciments to prove his discoveries, Herr Borchgrevials, in the course of his expedition, satisfactorily determined the exist substance in those seas of both these species. This knowledge is of high and especial

latence in those sens of both these species
This knowledge is of high and especial value at this moment, when, in consequence of the underlied depredation of the sent catchers in the Northern sens, an early extermination of the sens catchers in the Northern sens, an early extermination of the sens uthoritatively declared that, with a continuance of the present species or annuers in and dut of senson, the sens family in the Aroth sens will seen become animals of the past. Consequently, if a profitable region of fur-bearing sens can be opened up in the Antarctic regions a new and valuable commercial field will be accessible. It was on the probable advantages of developing and fostering such a freshindustry that President Chveland and Herr Borchgreviak talked a few days ago. ago. | 'the latter's expedition will be fitted

The latter's expolition will be fitted out under Logisth management, but its conditions are on a purely scientific basis. Therefore, in entering into any possible commercial projects as a sort of a side issue, the explorer would in no wise be breaking faith with the British supportors of the expedition.

In the Antarctic Ocean it is wall known that there are many uncompled and free islands that would make valuable stations for American conferrand whaters. In view of the deep interest the government of this country has taking in the soal-sherry question, it is not improbable that some arrangement may have been arrived at in the interview inculoned looking toward the lestablishment of such stations on some of these untonunced islands.

quoted from the Press statistics from the woolen mills in New England stowing disastrucs effects of the Democratic tariff law. These statistics showed that of the thirty-two milis from which returns were secured, 14 were shut down; 10 were running on quarter time; 5 on eighth time; 1 on half time, with 2 practically closed. The cesuit of this was to throw 7,500 operators practically out of work in the New England States, alone. The American Wool and Cotton Reporter tried to breat the farce of these figures, but the Press immediately fortified its postion with letters from the manufacturers themselves, sarcistically remarking:

DECISIONS IN LAW

Heculved by Clerk of Eastern Law District
The following decisions in law have been received by Charles F. Sweet, Esq., Clerk of the Eastern Law District.

Fall River. We are sorry, Patsy, that you will not wear a New England Lengue suit this year, for you are a comedian as well as a ball player. Patsy has a fund of dry and ready wit which has served to enliven many a game and put the spectators in good humor; when the situation was getting cretty hor.

One time in this city when about every man on the Fall River team, except Patsy, was kicking like a broucho at some decision of the number, somebody in the grand stand shouted:

"Why don't you kick too, Patsy's with 'aint me turn," sentendiously answered the rely-poly back stop.

Another time as the Fall Rivers were being driven to the Maplewood ball grounds Patsy discovered a little colored boy on the sidewalk. He exclaimed, "Ah, there's me little 'soon," and stop ping the 'bus grabbed the lattle thop, took him into the 'bus and upon arriving at the ball field walked him around the diamond for luck. The 'ittle fellow's fame as a muscot was instantly established.

On the other hand Mrs. Failer testified that the plaintiff did not at first claim to her that he had cought and pand for the farm, but only that he was entitled to the use of it and of the wood on it by paying taxes and doing some other things. The books of Mr. Failer, who was a trader, showed a large bulance against the plaintiff and also showed credits to the plaintiff on general account, but showed be account of the farm. Mrs Fulier is on her part also corroborated by two winesses who testify to statements by plaintiff whoily inconsistent with his present claim. clusion is irresistible that at least five of these enswers must have been fraudulent as well as false.

Where one asserts that certain statements are true, and that if not true this flat shall avoid the policy, the question whether they were actually material is not important, as parties have a right to make their truth the basis of the contract. But the instead obtained from the medical examiner a recommendation to which he was not entitled by means of willful laise statements, and the instantional concealment of the truth, in relation to matters which were undoubtedly material to the risk. This the law denominates fraud and steruly refuses to allow any person to prod by it.
